

Overview

Nimbus Notes is a fictional note-taking application used purely as a test fixture for the Universal File RAG PDF ingestion pipeline. It is not a real product and none of the policies described here apply to any actual service.

It supports notebooks, tags, and offline editing, and this document describes account limits, sync behavior, sharing permissions, and export formats in enough detail to exercise structure-aware chunking and page citation accuracy across several distinct sections and multiple pages.

The document is intentionally verbose in places so that its total length clears the length gate used to decide whether a hierarchical outline is worth building for a given file, rather than falling back to plain vector-only indexing.

Account Limits

Free accounts may create up to 100 notes and 5 notebooks, with a total attachment storage cap of 200 MB across the whole account. Notes beyond the 100 note limit cannot be created until existing notes are deleted or archived.

Pro accounts remove the note and notebook count limits entirely and raise the attachment storage cap to 50 GB. Pro accounts also unlock offline mobile sync, which Free accounts cannot use at all under any circumstance, even temporarily.

Exceeding the Free tier's storage cap blocks new attachment uploads but never blocks creating or editing plain text notes, since text notes do not count against the attachment storage cap at all.

Team accounts, available only as an add-on to Pro, allow up to 20 members sharing a pool of notebooks with individually assignable read or write permissions per notebook, configurable by the team administrator.

Sync and Conflicts

Nimbus Notes syncs every 30 seconds while online. If the same note is edited on two devices while offline, the version with the later edit timestamp wins automatically once both devices reconnect and sync completes.

The losing version is never deleted outright: it is saved into a Note History panel accessible from that note for 60 days, after which older history entries are purged automatically to save storage and cannot be recovered afterward.

Manual conflict resolution is available as a setting for Pro accounts, which pauses automatic conflict resolution and instead prompts the user to choose which version to keep, or to merge both versions manually into a new note.

Export Formats

Notes can be exported as Markdown, plain text, or PDF. Markdown export preserves headings, bold and italic formatting, and checklist items, but does not preserve inline images, which are only included in PDF export.

Bulk export of an entire notebook produces a single zip archive containing one file per note, named after each note's title with duplicate titles disambiguated by appending a numeric suffix such as '(2)' or '(3)'.

Exported PDFs always embed the note's creation and last-modified timestamps in the footer of every page, regardless of whether the original note displayed them in the app itself.

Sharing and Permissions

Individual notes can be shared via a link with view-only or comment-only permission on any account tier, including Free. Edit permission via shared link is a Pro-only feature.

Shared links can be set to expire after a chosen number of days, or left permanently active until manually revoked by the note's owner at any time, immediately invalidating the link for anyone who has it.

Team notebook permissions always take precedence over an individual note's link sharing settings: a Viewer-only team member cannot gain edit access to a note in that notebook even via a link marked as editable.

Billing and Refunds

Pro subscriptions bill monthly or annually, chosen at signup, with annual billing discounted 20 percent versus paying monthly for twelve months. Billing always occurs on the same calendar day each period as the original signup date, adjusted to the last day of shorter months when needed.

If a renewal payment fails, Nimbus Notes retries the charge daily for 7 days before downgrading the account to Free. Downgrading never deletes notes or notebooks even if the account then exceeds Free tier limits; excess notebooks simply become read-only until upgraded again or trimmed below the limit.

Refunds are issued only for annual subscriptions cancelled within 14 days of the billing date, prorated to the unused portion of the year. Monthly subscriptions are never eligible for partial refunds, though cancellation always takes effect at the end of the current billing period rather than immediately upon request.

Data Retention

When a user deletes their Nimbus Notes account entirely, all notes, attachments, and shared links are permanently removed after a 30 day grace period, during which the account can still be reactivated by signing back in with the original credentials.

After the grace period ends, deletion is irreversible and Nimbus Notes cannot recover any content under any circumstance, even upon a direct request from the account owner or a formal support escalation.

Team notebooks are handled differently on individual account deletion: if the deleted account was not the sole administrator of a team notebook, the notebook and its contents remain with the remaining team members untouched and fully accessible.

If the deleted account was the sole administrator of a team notebook, administrator rights transfer automatically to the longest-tenured remaining team member before the account deletion completes, so a team notebook is never left without an administrator.

Support Response Times

Free tier support requests are answered over email only, with a target response time of 5 business days and no guaranteed resolution time.

Pro tier support requests are answered within 1 business day, and Team add-on accounts additionally get access to live chat support during business hours in the account owner's configured timezone. Live chat availability does not extend to weekends or public holidays observed in that timezone, during which requests fall back to the standard 1 business day email response target.
